INVESTORS WANTED.

C. J. Little Points Out the Needs of Breathitt County.

Charles J. Little, a former citizen of Breathitt county, but now residing in Winchester, who stands among the first in the esteem and confidence of the people of this section, has written the following letter:

"To Hon. Henry Lawrence, Speaker of the House of Representatives, Frankfort, Ky.

"Dear Sir:—Allow me, as an humble citizen of the Commonwealth, to thank the House of Representatives, through you, for having acted so wisely as it did in voting down the resolution of Hon. W. A. Young providing for a committee to investigate conditions in Breathitt. I lived in that county for thirty-five years and am still closely identified with it through holding property there and my affection for its people.

"Conditions have changed very greatly in Breathitt, and law and order are as firmly established there as anywhere in the State. If the General Assembly wants to do anything for that region, let it make a liberal appropriation for a geological survey and to send Mr. Norwood and his assistants to begin work at once, so that they may speedily make a thorough and accurate report as to its natural resources. Let the public know its enormous deposits of coal, its great forests of timber, its lumbering supplies of oil, gas and other valuable products, and capital will do the rest.

"They do not want more politicians there, such as a committee on investigation might be, but investors who would give employment to people now idle and distribute the dollars which have the effect to make those who have a chance to get them conservative and law-abiding. Give those people railroads, mines and factories and you will hear no more of lawlessness. The surest way to bring this about is to be liberal with the geological survey, whose reports will do more to encourage the investments of capital than will any other influence.

"A republication of the old reports would be of immense aid at the present juncture. Would it be asking too much to request you to have this letter read to the House of Representatives, whose members I hope will not think me presumptuous in thus addressing them? Respectfully yours,

C. J. LITTLE."

CHAPTER XI.

DOES there exist an incredulous or jealous disdain of another portion of our country who, knowing that the room in the wooden cupola over Mr. Carew's library was customarily allotted to by Rouen as the "tower chamber," will prove himself so sectionally prejudiced as to deny that the town was a veritable hotbed of literary interest or that Sir Walter Scott was ill appreciated there? Some of the men looked sly and others grunted at mention of this apartment, but the romantic were not lacking who spoke of it in whispers—how the lights sometimes shone there all night long and the gentlemen drove away, white faced, in the dawn. The cupola, rising above the library, overlooked the garden and the house, save for that, was of a single story, with a low veranda running the length of its front. The windows of the library and of a row of bedrooms, one of which was Miss Betty's, lined the veranda steamboat fashion, the inner doors of these rooms all opening upon a long hall which bisected the house. The stairway leading to the room in the cupola rose in the library itself, while the bisecting hall afforded the only access to the library; hence the gossip, well acquainted with the geography of the place, conferred seriously together upon what effect Miss Betty's home coming would have in this connection, for any one going to the stairway must needs pass her door, and what was more to the point, a party of gentlemen descending late from the mysterious turret might not be so quiet as they intended and the young lady suddenly disturbed to inquire of her father what entertainment he provided that should keep his guests until 4 in the morning.

But at present it was with the opposite end of the house that the town was occupied, for there workmen were hammering and sawing and painting all day long, finishing the addition Mr. Carew was building for his daughter's debut. This hammering disturbed Miss Betty, who had become almost as busy with the French revolution as with her manna maker, for she had found in her father's library many books not for convent shelves, and she had become a Girondin.

She found memoirs, histories and tales of that delectable period, and for a week there was no meal in that house to which she set down earlier than half an hour late. She had a right to property interest in the revolution, her own great-uncle having been one of those who suffered, not, however, under the guillotine, for to Georges Mellicoe appertained the rare distinction of death by accident on the day when the huskiness young Bonaparte played upon the mob with his cannon.

The were some yellow letters of this great-uncle's in a box which had belonged to her grandmother, a rich discovery for Miss Betty, who read and reread them with eager and excited eyes, living more in Paris with Georges and his friends than in Rouen with her father. Indeed, she had little else to do. Mr. Carew was no comrade for her, by far the reverse. She seldom saw him, except at the table, when he sat with averted eyes and talked to her very little, and, while making elaborate preparation for her introduction to his friends (such was his phrase), he treated her with a perfunctory civility which made her wonder if her advent was altogether welcome to him, but when she noticed that his hair looked darker than usual about every fourth day she began to understand why he appeared ungrateful to her for growing up. He went out a great deal, though no visitors came to the house, for it was known that Mr. Carew desired to present his daughter to no one until he presented her to all. Fanchon Baroud, indeed, made one hurried and embarrassed call, evading Miss Betty's reference to the chevalier of the kitchen with a dexterity too nimble to be thought unthoughtful. Miss Carew was forbidden to return her friend's visit until after her debut, and Mr. Carew explained that there were always some worthless young men hanging about Baroud's, where, he did not add, they interfered with a worthy old one who desired to honor Fanchon's older sister, Virginia, with his attentions.

This was no great hardship for Miss Betty, as, since plunging into the revolution with her great-uncle, she had lost some curiosity concerning the men of today, doubting that they would show forth as heroic, as debonair, gay and tragic as he. He was the legendary hero of her childhood. She remembered her mother's stories of him perhaps more clearly than she remembered her mother, and one of the older sisters had known him in Paris and had talked of him at great length, giving the flavor of his dandyism and his beauty at first hand to his young relative.

In the library hung a small full length drawing of Georges, done in color by Miss Betty's grandmother, and this she carried to her own room and studied long and ardently until sometimes the man himself seemed to stand before her.

Miss Betty had an impression that her grandmother's art of portraiture would have been more successful with the profile than the "full face." Nevertheless, nothing could be more clearly indicated than that the hair of M. Mellicoe was very yellow and his short, huge lapied waistcoat white, striped with saffron. An enormous cravat covered his chin; the heavy collar of his yellow coat rose behind his ears, while his tulle felt to his ankles, and the tight trousers of white and yellow stripes were tied with white ribbons about the middle of the calf. He wore white stockings and gold buckled yellow shoes and on the back of his head a faintly cocked black hat. Miss Betty innocently wondered why his letters did not speak of Fanchon, of Virginia or of Dumortier, since in the historical novels which she read the hero's lot was inevitably linked with that of every one of importance in his generation. Yet Georges appeared to have been unacquainted with these personages, Robespierre being the only name of consequence mentioned in his letters, and then it appeared in much the same fashion practiced by her father in alluding to the governor of the state, who had the misfortune to be unpopular with Mr. Carew. But this did not dim her great-uncle's luster in Miss Betty's eyes or lessen for her the pathetic romance of the smile he wore.

Beholding this smile, one remembered the end to which his light footsteps had led him, and it was unavoidable to picture him left lying in the empty street behind the back of the flying crowd, carefully forming that antique smile on his lips and taking much pride in passing with some small, cynical speech, murmured to himself, concerning the inability of a gentleman's getting shot by his friends for merely being present to applaud them. So, fancying him thus with his yellow hair, his scarlet striped waistcoat and his tragedy, the young girl got a share of family greatness or at least of picturesque descent to her, and she smiled sadly back upon the smile in the picture and dreamed about its original night after night.

Whether or no another figure, that of a dark young man in a white hat, with a white kitten clinging to his wrist in red, found place in her dreams at this period is impossible to determine. She did not see him again. It is quite another thing, hazardous to venture, to state that he did not see her. At all events, it is certain that many people who had never beheld her were talking of her; that Rouen was full of contention concerning her beauty and her gift of music, for a song can be heard through an open window. And how did it happen that Crailley Gray knew that it was Miss Carew's habit to stroll in her garden for half an hour or so each evening before retiring and that she went to mass every morning soon after sunrise? Crailley Gray never rose at or near sunrise in his life, though he sometimes beheld it from another point of view, as the end of the evening. It appears that some one must have told him.

One night when the moon lay white on the trees and house tops Miss Betty paused in her evening promenade and seated herself upon a bench on the borders of the garden, wrought upon by the tender incentive to sighs and melancholy which youth in loneliness finds in a lovelessness of the earth, for what reason she could not have told, since she was without care or sorrow that she knew except the French revolution, yet tears shone upon the long lashes. She shook them off and looked up with a sudden old consciousness. The next second she sprang to her feet with a gasp and a choked outcry, her hands pressed to her breast.

Two paces in front of her a gap in the shrubbery where tall trees rose left a small radiant area of illumination like that of a limelight in a theater. Its brilliancy illumined by the dark foliage behind. It was open to view only from the bench by which she stood, and appeared, indeed, like the stage of a little theater, a stage occupied by a bizarre figure. For, in the center of this shining patch, with the light strong on his face, was standing a fair haired young man dressed in a yellow coat, a scarlet and white striped waistcoat, wearing

"Don't come near!" she gasped.

A faintly cocked black hat on his head. And even to the last detail, the ribbon laces above the ankle and the gold buckled shoes, he was the sketch of Georges Mellicoe sprung into life.

About this slender figure there hung a wan sweetness like a fine mist, almost an ethereality in that light; yet in the pale face lurked something reckless, something of the actor, too; and though his smile was gentle and wistful, there was a twinkle behind it not seen at first, something amused and impish; a small surprise underneath, like a dea lu rose jar.

Fixed to this by this apparition, Miss Betty stood wildly staring, her straining eyelids showing the white above and below the large brown iris. Her breath came faster and deeper until between her parted lips it became vocal in a quick sound like a sob.

At that he spoke.

"Forgive me!" The voice was low, vibrant and so exceedingly musical that he might have been accused of coolly selecting his best tone; and it became only sweeter when, even more softly, in a semi-whisper of almost crucial pleading, he said, "Ah, don't go away!"

In truth she could not go. She had been too vitally stirred. She began to tremble excessively and sank back upon the bench, motuouly him away with vague gestures of her shaking hands.

This was more than the incredulous had counted upon and far from his desires. He started forward, with an exclamation.

"Don't come near!" she gasped.

"Who are you? Go away?" "Give me one second to explain," he began, but with the instant reassurance of this beginning she cut him off short, her fears dispelled by his composure. Nay, indignation displaced them so quickly that she fairly flashed up before him to her full height.

"You did not come to my garden?" she cried. "What do you mean by coming here in that dress? What right have you to my garden?" "Just one word," he begged quickly, but very gently. "You'd allow a street beggar that much?"

She stood before him panting and, as he thought, glorious in her flush of youth and anger. Tom Vauvrel had painted her inebriately, but richly in spite of that, his whole heart being in the portrait, and Crailley Gray had smiled at what he deemed the exaggeration of an ordinarily unimpressive man who had fallen in love "at first sight," yet in the presence of the reality the incredulous decided that Tom's colors had been gray and ham-like.

"If you have anything to say for yourself, say it quickly!" said Miss Betty.

"You were singing a while ago," he answered somewhat huskily, "and I stopped on the street to listen; then I came here to be nearer. The spell of your voice!" He broke off abruptly to change the word. "The spell of the song came over me—it is my dearest favorite—so that I stood afterward in a sort of trance, only hearing again in the silence 'The stolen heart, like the gathered rose, will bloom but for a day.' I did not see you until you came to the bench. You must believe me, I would not have frightened you for anything in the world."

"Why are you wearing that dress?" He laughed and pointed to where, behind him on the ground, lay a long gray cloak, upon which had been tossed a white mask. "I'm on my way to the masquerade," he answered, with an airy gesture. "I'm an incognito, you see, and I had the costume made from my recollection of a sketch of your great-uncle. I saw it a long time ago in your library."

Miss Carew's incredulous pose was quite recovered, for she was accustomed to a certain distinct trace of disappointment, thus the brilliant apparition must be so tame an explanation. What he said was palpably the truth. There was a masquerade that night, she knew, at the Madellous', a little way up Carew street, and her father had gone an hour earlier, a blue smile over his arm.

The incredulous was a person of almost marked perceptiveness. He felt the lack of a mask, and feared a failure. This would not do. The attitude of tension between them must be renewed at once. "You'll forgive me?" he began in a quickly impetuous tone. "It was only after you sang a dream possessed me, and—"

"I cannot stay to talk with you," Miss Betty interrupted and added with a straightforwardness which made him afraid, "I would prove lamentably direct. 'I do not know you.'"

She turned toward the house, whereupon he gave a little pathetic exclamation of pleading in a voice that was masterly, being as sincere as it was musical, and he took a few halting steps toward her, both feet stretched.

"One moment more!" he pleaded, "I have one chance of my life, for I love you. Don't deny me this. I will meet you when the happy moment comes, will dance with you, will kiss you, see you when they tell you to you sing. I alone, must I stand behind the gates or steel like a thief your garden to hear you from a distance. Listen to me just this once, for a moment."

"I cannot listen," she said, and with a whisk of her skirts she fell on the gravel path and was gone. He stood dumfounded, poor comedian, having come to play the chief role, but to find the scene taken out of his hands.

PUBLIC SALE.

I will, at one o'clock, at the court house steps, on Monday, February 19th, 1906, county court day, offer at public sale to the highest bidder, my farm containing one hundred and thirty two acres of land lying one and one-half miles south of Mt. Sterling, with Levee turn-pike dividing same into two tracts of 87 and 45 acres each. I shall offer first the 45 acres with two ponds and a pair of stock scales on the east side of pike, then the 87 acres of well improved land, all modern and necessary conveniences, splendid milk house, cemented in and out-side at kitchen door, new stock barn and splendid young orchard of five kinds of fruit. This is one of the best located and best watered farms in the State—watered by seven springs. I will then offer farm as a whole, the highest bid being taken.

Terms, one-third cash and balance in one and two years from date of sale, deferred payments to bear 6 per cent per annum interest, and to be secured by a lien retained upon the property. Purchasers will be permitted to pay as much cash as they desire.

FRIDAY, FEB. 2.

Much comment and severe criticism is heard regarding the action of Hon. W. A. Young in introducing a bill before the present session of the Legislature of the Commonwealth to provide for the appointment of a peace commissioner to visit Breathitt County. A substitute bill was introduced by our Representative, John Griffith, and the Young bill was rightly defeated.

We are not going to inquire into the motive of Mr. Young in introducing that bill, but we want to say that in so doing he was either grossly ignorant of the true state of affairs in Breathitt county, or he had some malicious purpose in view. Breathitt county, under the present administration, is, perhaps, the most law abiding county in the State. We have a set of officers who mean to do and will do their duty and the law breakers have come to know that fact, and what led Mr. Young to believe that it was in a state of lawlessness is beyond our comprehension and beyond the comprehension of every other citizen of Breathitt county.

If Mr. Young and other members of the Kentucky Legislature want to help Breathitt county, let them do something toward helping develop her resources. Breathitt county is rich in timber, coal, oil and other minerals, more so, perhaps, than any other county in the State, and her vast fields of coal are practically untouched. We need something to show this to the outside world so that capital seeking investment will know what it is getting for the investment; and in order to show this to the outside world, we must have a report made on the treasures of wealth which the hills of Eastern Kentucky contain. The Legislature should make an appropriation to the State Geologist and have him examine and publish a report on the minerals of this county. He should do it at once, and when we can show the outside world by such report, the great opportunity which is presented for investment we can get investors to come here.

Kentucky has kept behind the race of development because of the insufficiency of reports on her wealth. West Virginia in a comparatively few years has developed into one of the most enterprising States in our Union; and it can be all directly traceable to the work of the Geological Survey of that State. The survey showed investors what the State contained, and investors came; and if Kentucky should make a sufficient appropriation for her geological survey to show investors what we have, investors would come here.

That is the sort of a peace committee Breathitt needs; show capital what we have, help our people to get more work and more money, and when capital does come, it can come knowing that its interests and property will be protected and that the reports sent out by such work as the bill of Mr. Young exist only in the mind of a few and have no grounds or foundations to bear them out.

We have never had any complaint from persons who have invested their money in this section of the State, that their property is not protected and we do not intend to have any complaints, but we do want more investors and the only way to get them is to show them that we have the materials for investment.

TOUR EUROPE FREE

The Courier-Journal To Take Nineteen Young Women Abroad As Its Guests.

The Courier-Journal is conducting a popularity contest that eclipses anything of the kind ever promoted in this section. Briefly the Courier-Journal proposes to take on a seven weeks' tour abroad nineteen young women from Kentucky and Southern Indiana, all expenses paid, from the day the party leaves Louisville, July 12, until it returns to "The Old Kentucky Home," August 29. To give all a chance the Courier-Journal has divided Louisville and Kentucky and Southern Indiana into eighteen districts, and the most popular young woman from each district is to be the one to make the tour. The nineteenth young woman is to be selected in another way. Readers of the Courier-Journal are to select the guests for the paper, by ballot. It is estimated that the trip alone will cost the Courier-Journal about $15,000, to say nothing of incidental and other necessary expenses. There may be a young woman from this section who is a candidate for this tour. Write the Courier-Journal, Louisville, Ky., for a list of candidates and full details of the tour.

During a quarrel over a debt of 50 cents Joshua Meadows shot and instantly killed his cousin, Burton Little, at Hazard last week. After the deed Meadows attempted suicide by shooting himself, but inflicted a slight wound only.

It is thought that he was poisoned, as he had just taken a dose of medicine from a bottle and died in about twenty minutes. His daughter took a small quantity of the medicine, which made her sick and she was saved only by heroic efforts. There is a mystery about this case, as he had taken all the medicine out of the bottle but the last dose. It is thought that some one had changed the contents of the bottle and that Tharp took it thinking it was genuine. A thorough investigation will be made into the matter.

THE DEATH ROLL.

Mrs. Lydia Holbrooks, wife of Isaac Holbrooks, died at her home near Rousseau, of pneumonia Thursday.

The five-months-old child of Mr. and Mrs. George R. Green, died last Saturday night at the home of Rev. W. W. Green, after a short illness. It was buried Sunday in the Sewell burying ground. Mr. and Mrs. Green live at Harrison Station and were visiting Mr. Green's parents, Rev. and Mrs. W. W. Green.

The A. L. & V. Co. are rebuilding the bridge across the river just below town. They are putting in two wooden spans, one on each side of the river, and a steel span fifty feet long, leaving room for rafts and drift timber to pass through. J. B. Cason of the L. & E. Ry., is superintending the work.

The children of Pleasant Whiteley, who died several years ago and who was a pensioner, have been granted a pension at the rate of $2 per month each, in addition to the $8 per month granted to Pleasant Whiteley in his lifetime. Their first check came in last week for $356.33, which was the amount due to date. James Clemons is their guardian.

Calab Fletcher and family, of Simpson, left here Thursday for Nicholasville, where they will make their future home. Mr. Fletcher has lived here all of his life and is one of our best citizens and we are sorry to see him leave. He goes there to engage in farming and to send his children to school. We wish them much success in their home.

Sheriff Breck Crawford, the newly elected Sheriff of Breathitt county, brought to the local asylum Tuesday for confinement, Oliver Johnson, aged 32. The patient was born blind, which affliction later in life unbalanced his mind, making him truly an object of pity. This is the second patient thus doubly afflicted that has been admitted to the asylum in the last ten days, the other being a woman from Fayette county.—Lexington Leader.

Judge Blanton Writes Concerning Young's Bill.

Judge W. H. Blanton, former County Attorney of Breathitt, has written the following letter, which explains itself:
Hon. Henry Lawrence, Speaker of the House of Representatives, Frankfort, Ky:

My Dear Sir:—The bill introduced in your body some days ago by Hon. W. A. Young, of Rowan county, asking for a committee on investigation for Breathitt county, but which was promptly and properly voted down by your honorable body, seems to me to require some explanation and expression of feeling by those who are more acquainted with Breathitt county, than the member who introduced the bill.

I have lived in Breathitt county for many years; have raised a large family here; have been County Judge and County Attorney of Breathitt county, and I know that at the present time and under the present administration law and order will prevail, and our future looks very bright and prosperous. We don't need peace committees, because they always do more harm than good. We don't, at the present, need any interference from the State authorities; we have gone past what the State at large called the "state of lawlessness in Breathitt," and peace reigns all over the county.

The people here are waiting for developments. They want their resources developed. They are inviting inspection of their fields of coal, oils and minerals, and are as far from the idea which the Hon. Young wished to convey as light is from dark. If people come to us to invest we can show them what we have, but as all investors can not visit us, and in order to show them what our county and Eastern Kentucky contains, we need some report made of our vast fields of wealth, such as coal, timber and minerals.

If the Legislature of Kentucky wants to help Breathitt county, let it make a provision to have a report made of its coal and minerals and we can assure any capitalists or investors who may come to be interested by the report so made, that their interest will be protected to a greater extent than any other place in the United States. Our people need work, and when capital comes, they will have work; and in order to induce capital to come, we must show that we have the resources for investment; and the Legislature of Kentucky ought to be interested to show what our State contains.

If this Legislature wants to do something for the people of Breathitt county let it make an appropriation to make a report on her resources and no one need fear but that any investment made here will be protected.

I would like you to have this letter read before your Honorable Body. Yours very respectfully,
W. H. BLANTON.

Little Boy Kills His Mother.

A special from Campton dated January 30, says:—In a frenzy of rage, induced by a spanking from his mother for neglect of duty, Willis Hatton, the seven-year-old son of John Hinton, a planter, of Rogers, shot and killed his mother last night. When the boy realized what he had done he threw himself upon her body and told the onlooking ears that he had meant no harm, and with all the words at the command of his infant tongue implored her to speak to him. In the afternoon Mrs. Hinton had sent the little fellow on an errand with instructions to hurry back. He did not return until night. The mother spanked him. As soon as the lad was free he turned to his mother and exclaimed: "I will kill you for that." He rushed into his father's room and securing a pistol from a bureau drawer, returned and shot his mother.

Perry County Prisoners.

Deputy Collector M. H. Holliday, of Perry county, was here Tuesday. He had just returned from a raid in Pike, Letcher and Floyd counties, where he destroyed four large moonshine distilleries and captured another outfit, all except the still, which the shiners had just taken away. Henry Adams was the owner of one of the distilleries and is considered one of the most desperate men in the mountains. He fired several shots at Mr. Holliday and his posse, but did not hit either of them. He and Deputy Marshal Horne brought 13 prisoners, charged with various offenses, here for trial before U. S. Commissioner R. A. Hurst.

The Golden Milestone.

Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Bailey celebrated their golden wedding at their home, in this city, Wednesday, of this week, it being the last day of January. They were married to each other fifty years ago, and their union has been blessed by ten children, nine daughters and one son.

A large crowd of their friends gathered at their home Wednesday evening, bringing with them many costly presents. One valuable remembrance was twenty dollars in gold, given them by some of their friends, who combined their gifts. A most sumptuous meal was served at three o'clock and the entire crowd present partook of a most delicious feast. It was, indeed, a most impressive occasion to see the favorite couple after two score and ten years of happy wedlock as they renewed their vows and again spoke words of fidelity. The services were conducted by Rev. W. W. Powell, with most fitting ceremony, and with words of thanksgiving for their happy union.

Mr. and Mrs. Bailey are among our most highly respected citizens. The News joins their many friends here and elsewhere in wishing them many happy returns, and yet many prosperous years together.

SHERIFF'S SALE.

By virtue of Execution No. 1669, in favor of B. M. Puckett, &c., vs. S. S. Spradlin, which issued from the Clerk's office of the Breathitt Circuit Court, I, on one of my deputies, will, on between the hours of 4 o'clock a. m. and 2 o'clock p. m., at the Court House door, in Breathitt County, Ky., expose to public sale to the highest bidder, the following property (or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy the amount of the plaintiff's debt, interest and costs), to-wit:

One-half interest in the two following tracts of land in Breathitt County, first, beginning at the mouth of a branch opposite or near the upper end of S. P. Chandler's farm, thence up the river with its meanders to the mouth of a branch commonly called the Campbell Branch; Berry Shaekeford's line; thence a straight line to two white oaks and a sugar tree on the ridge, which is marked; thence with Berry Shaekeford's marked line to the branch; thence with the meander of the branch to the beginning, containing 200 acres; also, the following land: beginning at the mouth of the Cedar branch, on a large beech; thence up the river to Berry Shaekeford's line; thence with said line to Thomas Sewell's line; thence with Sewell's line to the top of the ridge; thence with the ridge to J. S. Sheffield's line; down the hill to the beginning, except coal pit of M. Puckett, levied upon as the property of S. S. Spradlin.

Terms: Sale will be made on a credit of six months, bond with approved security required, bearing interest at the rate of six per cent per annum from day of sale, and having the force and effect of a sale bond. This 30th day of January, 1906.

Lee Kelly, of Knott county, was the guest of Jasper Stacy and wife Sunday. He was on his return from Oklahoma, where he went to take Mrs. William Ritchie. Mr. Ritchie went there some time ago to engage in business. Joseph Ritchie, a merchant of Knott county, passed through here on his way to Jackson on business. Jasper Stacy is buying walnut logs and ties. He will have several on the next tide. Isom Terry has gone to Jackson and Morgan counties. S. L. B. Stacy has moved to Quicksand, near the Round Bottom. We regret to give him up, as he was one of our best citizens. Wm. Napier, of Magoffin county, formerly of this place, is moving back to the old home. We welcome him back in our midst. Sam Terry has been on the sick list for a few days. G. B. Holliday has completed his little house. John A. Smith has accepted a position with the Slemg Coal Co. at $50 a month.

A Feast Coming.

"Hi, Tommy! Come get a place in the line! Willie Jones is buying a cent's worth of candy!"—New York World.

A man who once had rough, horny hands made them soft and smooth with Witch Hazel Salve, but he used the genuine—just bearing the name "E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago." For sores, boils, cuts, burns, bruises, etc., it has no equal and affords almost immediate relief from blind, bleeding itching and protruding piles. Sold by Jackson Drug Co.

Newspapers have been ranked as a text book at Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., and hereafter students in the American history class of Prof. James must come to the recitation rooms prepared to answer questions on the news of the day.

They never gripe or sicken, but cleanse and strengthen the stomach, liver and bowels. This is the universal verdict of the many thousands who use DeWitt's Little Early Riders. These famous little pills relieve headache, constipation, biliousness, jaundice, torpid liver, sallow complexion, try Little Early Riders. Jackson Drug Co.

Mrs. Mary Athy, one of the most prominent women of Camp, died last week, after being ill only four days with typhoid fever. She leaves a husband and two sons.

Sick Headache.

This distressing ailment results from a disordered condition of the stomach. All that is needed to effect a cure is a dose or two of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. In fact the attack may be warded off or greatly lessened in severity, by taking a dose of these tablets as soon as the first symptom of an attack appears. Sold by the Jackson Drug Co.

Dow Landsaw, ninety-seven years old, a prominent citizen of Wolfe county, died last week at his home on Devil's Creek. He had been married three times and leaves a large family.

The Best Physic.

When you want a physic that is mild and gentle, easy to take, and that acts, always use Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. For sale by Jackson Drug Co.

The philosophy of Marshall Field, the merchant prince of Chicago, who recently died in New York, was: "Never give a note, never borrow, never buy on margin, never place a mortgage, concentrate on your work."

Afraid of Strong Medicines.

Many people suffer for years from rheumatic pains, and prefer to do so rather than take the strong medicines usually given for rheumatism, not knowing that quick relief from pain may be had simply by applying Chamberlain's Pain Balm and without taking any medicine internally. For sale by the Jackson Drug Co.

In pruning trees aim to distribute the cuttings sufficiently throughout the entire tree.

FOUND.

John W. Dean had a pain in his back for about five years and it finally became so great that he could not work and, in fact, could not walk at times. Several physicians failed to cure him, but he found a remedy. It was Smith's Kidney and Nerve Tonic. For sale by S. H. Stidham & Son, Jackson, Ky.

Followed by Leader.

The other day when a question of order was brought up in the house Charles Landis of Indiana entered the house hurriedly. Just as his name was called, says the Washington correspondent of the New York Times. He looked around and then asked Acheson of Pennsylvania how Grover voted. When the Pennsylvania member replied that the snowy-headed member from Ohio had voted in the affirmative, Landis did the same.

Later Acheson asked Landis why he did that, whereupon Landis told a story.

He said that back in the old days when John Allen of Mississippi was the wit of the house he came in one day in the same way and heard his name called just as he entered the hall. He at once turned to old Billy Breckinridge of Kentucky and asked him how Taulbee from the same state voted.

"Taulbee voted yes," said Breckinridge.

"Yes!" yelled Allen as loudly as he could.

Some one asked John why he wanted to vote the same as Taulbee did.

"Well," drawled the private, "I always do that. Taulbee looks just like my colonel in the war, and I followed him all through and never got into any trouble."

Pirating Foley's Honey and Tar.

Foley & Co., Chicago, originated Honey and Tar as a throat and lung remedy and on account of the great merit and popularity of Foley's Honey and Tar many imitations are offered for the genuine. For Biliousness and Sick Headache.

Take Orino Laxative Fruit Syrup. It sweetens the stomach, aids digestion and acts as a gentle stimulant on the liver and bowels without irritating the organs. Orino Laxative Fruit Syrup cures biliousness and habitual constipation. Does not nauseate or gripe and is mild and pleasant to take. Remember the name Orino and refuse to accept any substitute. Jackson Drug Co.

Her Complexion.

Mistress—Her complexion is genuine, isn't it? Maid—Oh, yes, indeed! I've seen the box she takes it from, and it says, "Use no imitation!"—Browning's Magazine.

All old-time cough syrups bind the bowels. This is wrong. A new idea was advanced two years ago in Kennedy's Laxative Honey and Tar. This remedy acts on the mucous membranes of the throat and lungs and loosens the bowels at the same time. It expels all cold from the system. It clears the throat, strengthens the mucous membranes, relieves coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough, etc. Sold by Jackson Drug Co.

A Happy Release.

Startling, But True.

People the world over were horrified on learning of the burning of a Chicago theater in which nearly six hundred people lost their lives, yet more than five times this number or over 3,000 people died from pneumonia in Chicago during the same year, with scarcely a passing notice. Every one of these cases of pneumonia resulted from a cold and could have been prevented by the timely use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. A great many who had every reason to fear pneumonia have warded it off by the prompt use of this remedy. The following is an instance of this sort: "Too much cannot be said in favor of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and especially for colds and influenza. I know that it cured my daughter, Laura, of a severe cold and I believe saved her life when she was threatened with pneumonia."
